HORTICULTUREFALL CARE FOR CALLA LILY

Size of Plant and Flowers Are Largely Governed by Size of Pot in Which Placed.

When a calla has bloomed in the house during the winter, it should be kept watered until summer, then bedded out in a sunny situation in the garden. There let nature care for it until fall, when it should be repotted.

Calla Lily.

says Park's Floral Magazine. If you have a large tuber, and you wish large flowers, then use a large pot. If you want a dwarf plant, use a small pot. The size of the plant and the flowers are largely governed by the size of the pot. When a plant fails to develop properly, it is mostly because the soil is sour or unfit for the growth and development of the plant.

MONOGRAMS ON CHOICE FRUIT

Clever Little Trick Performed by Pasting on Perforated Paper Before Apples Color.

A story comes from Oregon to the effect that the big fruit growers in that section are now growing monograms on their choice fruit. It enhances their value in the big markets in the east. It is claimed that a large grower of fancy apples at Hood River now places the monogram of a prominent New York hotel on a large portion of his crop. This is done by pasting perforated paper labels containing the monogram on the cheek of the apples while green. When the fruit colors in the sun the words are left in red on a green background, and the whole design has the appearance of having been stamped on in dainty ink.

The Best Grafting Wax.

Rosin four parts (ounces or pounds); beeswax two parts; tallow one part; melted slowly in an iron vessel, putting in the rosin five or ten minutes before the beeswax; and all completely mixed together by much stirring.

In 20 minutes or so it will be thoroughly mixed, and a convenient portion is to be poured into a bucket of cold water. In a minute or less it will be cool enough to take up with the hands (which must be greased with tallow) and pulled like taffy. When it becomes light yellow in color it is done and can be made into sticks or balls and put into another vessel of cold water to harden.

Other portions can be treated in the same way until all is used up. These balls, or sticks, of convenient size can be laid away until required for use.

The Brown Slug.

The little brown slug that defoliates the pear, plum and cherry trees during the summer season is one of the easiest of our insects to control. No one need allow this insect to do any serious harm to his trees, if he will thoroughly use the remedy here given. Steep two ounces of fresh white hellebore in one gallon of water, and use as a spray when the slugs are first seen. Stir the mixture often; or, better yet, have an agitator attachment on the pump. Sometimes there is a second brood of the slugs, necessitating a second spraying.

Norway Spruce.

Great importance is attached to the experiment of planting Norway spruce in Maine. This is the first attempt of the kind in New England, but experimenters believe that the future supply of the denuded states may be replaced in this way.

Whitewashed Trees.

A little whitewash on the trunks of the shade trees will make the trees look attractive and give the place an appearance of refinement. The lime in the whitewash will be repulsive to bark beetles and borers for a while.

Testing Seed Corn Before Planting.

Seed corn which has been stored through the winter under ordinary conditions in South Carolina, is often thought to need no testing before planting. But the high price of land and the additional expense of replanting the field demands that the progressive farmer know more about the quality of seed that he is to plant.

The proper time to make the germinating test is about three weeks before planting, so that if any bad ears are found in the lot and discarded, the ears which are to take their place may also be tested before the seed are placed in the soil.

A convenient sized testing box for the average farmer is one that is 24 inches by 24 inches, and about 4 to 6 inches deep. This box can be made from six inch plank or a soap or starch box sawed down to the desired depth can be used. This box should have a layer of at least two inches of wet sawdust packed tightly over the bottom. It will be found convenient to wet the sawdust in an old sack by letting (the sack containing the sawdust) soak in warm water for 20 to 30 minutes, so that the sawdust may have an equal moisture content throughout.

Having completed the box, take a piece of white cloth, which should be a little larger than the box, and mark off one hundred squares 2x2 inches. Number each of these consecutively from 1 to 100, then dip this cloth into a bucket of water and stretch it evenly over the sawdust.

When the tester is complete, take the ears of corn to be tested and number each ear. Then take six kernels from each ear, two from opposite sides of the butt, two from opposite sides of the middle, and two from opposite sides of the tip. See that no two kernels are taken from the same row, and if the butt and tip kernels are taken one inch from the end of the ear, this will be an average sample. Having taken the kernels from the ears, place them in the square which is numbered to correspond to the number of the ear. Allow no two of them to touch, place them with the heart side up, and all of the tips pointing in the same direction. When grains from all the ears have been placed in the squares which correspond to the number of the ear from which they were taken, place another piece of wet cloth on top of them and cover this with 2 to 3 inches of wet sawdust. Then place the box in some place where it will remain warm. At the end of four days dampen the sawdust again by sprinkling some warm water over it. At the end of a week the tester should be examined by carefully removing the sawdust and top cloth. The numbers of all squares which do not show six big healthy sprouts should be ascertained, and the ears which have the corresponding numbers should not be planted.

A Strange Story.

Argyle, Mich.—Mrs. Wm. H. Carson, in a letter from Argyle, says: "I was almost wild with pain in my head, and other severe pains, due to womanly troubles. Cardui gave me great relief at once. Further use of Cardui raised me from my bed of agony. Cardui saved my life, and I can't be thankful enough for what it did for me." Whether seriously sick, or simply ailing, take Cardui, the woman's tonic. As a general tonic for women, to improve the appetite and build up the constitution, Cardui is in a class by itself. Those who have used it say it does the work; it relieves, it cures. Try it. Your druggist has it.
